The college which is not after a million dollars or so endowment is a rare institution these days.

Not all the strain is on the officials of the government; Sam Gompers has been going through not a little worry during the last few months.

Those laymen who circulated the report about the nature of Pres. Wilson's illness are having more or less of a "brain lesion" themselves in justifying themselves for putting the report in

The Northfield News devoted a majority of its news space in this week's issue to the chronicling of the centennial anniversary of Norwich university and did a good job of it considering the handicap that a weekly newspaper has in handling events which cover several

Those Morgan and Arab saddle horses that are engaged in the endurance test on the round-about route from Fort Ethan Allen to Camp Devens are being favored with good footing. A gravel road is far easier for them than a glazed macadam. Moreover, the weather conditions are quite favorable for making good records on the 300-mile trip.

Cable dispatches announce that the "Paris night life" of ante-bellum days has not returned in spite of the fact that France has formally ratified the treaty of peace. Perhaps the French people have become more sobered by the war. Perhaps, too, the absence of thousands of American tourists accounts for more sane conditions, there being little incentive for restauranteurs and others to put on the bizarre and spectacular

When the Vermont branch of the American Legion holds its first annual convention in Burlington during the latter part of October there should be no indication of a split in the membership, with the veterans of the 26th division on the one side and the other members arrayed against them, as was evidenced in the political machinations of the Massachusetts branch convention recently. The ranks should be closed up and kept closed up from the very beginning of the history of the Vermont branch There should be no military aristocracy and no class distinctions in the Vermont branch. Let it be a united American Legion in Vermont.

to a recent article by the Rutland Herlay stress enough on the fact that the er ways. roads complained of by the Rutland paper are located either in the city of Burlington or in close proximity to that city. So the indictment is against Burlington and bordering towns rather than We have just received the testimony of friends, bringing personal greetings from a Massachusetts man who rode from Boston to Barre, that the roads were excellent with the exception of a certain and the other in the University of Calistrip through New Hampshire. So there fornia. It will be recalled that Mrs. you are, neighbor! A great deal of test. Dewey, formerly Miss Kate Erskine of you are, neighbor! A great deal of testimony is being made that Vermont roads are good, in fact, better than the roads of our neighboring state. If the town and has engaged rooms in T. then Germany has only herself to blame for the exodus and the loss of economic power. One reason why Germany start. Harry E. Humphrey to Sing in Barre ed the war was to spread out her borders to accommodate the rapidly growing cially engaged to make records for the German population, it being held by her lecture system of the Panama canal conleaders that the former bounds were filling to their limit. This problem of congestion of population has been solved but not in the way in which German eaders expected. Instead of expanding their borders they have succeeded in contracting them, together with squeezing a considerable part of the German population outside of those borders into other lands which, industrially, may gain The Burlington News calls attention much at the expense of Germany.
